Book -- hardcopy

Okuda, Michael, and Denise Okuda. 1993. "Star Trek" Chronology: The History of the Future. New York: Pocket Books.

Book -- from a database or website

Follow the format shown above, but add the appropriate information (access date and DOI, URL, or database name with identification number) as shown in the examples for Journal Articles.

Book -- Kindle, Nook, etc.

Anijar, Karen. 2000. Teaching toward the 24th Century: "Star Trek" as Social Curriculum. New York: Falmer. Kindle edition.

Book Article or Chapter -- hardcopy

James, Nancy E. 1988. "Two Sides of Paradise: The Eden Myth According to Kirk and Spock." In Spectrum of the Fantastic, edited by Donald Palumbo, 219-223. Westport, CT: Greenwood.

Book Article or Chapter -- from a database or website

Follow the format shown above, but add the appropriate information (access date and DOI, URL, or database name with identification number) as shown in the examples for Journal Articles.

Encyclopedia Article -- well-known or alphabetically arranged encyclopedias or dictionaries

Do not include these in the reference list. Cite them only in the parenthetical references in the text (see examples below).

Encyclopedia Article -- hardcopy -- lesser-known encyclopedias or encyclopedias that are not arranged alphabetically (treated the same as book articles or chapters)

Barr, Marleen S. 2005. "Science Fiction." In New Dictionary of the History of Ideas, edited by Maryanne Cline Horowitz, 5:2188-91. Detroit: Charles Scribner's Sons.

Encyclopedia Article -- from a database or website -- lesser-known encyclopedias or encyclopedias that are not arranged alphabetically

Follow the format shown above, but add the appropriate information (access date and DOI, URL, or database name with identification number) as shown in the examples for Journal Articles.

Newspaper Article -- hardcopy or website

Do not include these in the reference list. Cite them only in the parenthetical references in the text (see examples below).

Newspaper Article -- from a database

Di Rado, Alicia. 1995. "Trekking through College: Classes Explore Modern Society Using the World of Star Trek." Los Angeles Times, March 15. Accessed April 10, 2013. ProQuest (293089200).

If the database provides a DOI or persistent URL, use that instead of the database name and identification number (see the examples for Journal Articles). Note that the month and day are separated from the year. Do not include the page numbers. However, the newspaper's magazine section and weekend supplements should be treated as if they were regular magazines, so the page numbers (if available) should be included.

Magazine Article -- hardcopy or website

Do not include these in the reference list. Cite them only in the parenthetical references in the text (see examples below).

Magazine Article -- from a database

Marks, John. 2011. "Beethoven vs Star Trek." Stereophile, December, 51-57. Accessed April 21, 2013. General OneFile (A299639194).

If the database provides a DOI or persistent URL, use that instead of the database name and identification number (see the examples for Journal Articles). Note that the month (and day if there is one) is separated from the year.

Webpage -- with a person as the author

Batchelor, David Allen. 2009. "The Science of Star Trek." National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Accessed April 24, 2013. http://www.nasa.gov/topics/technology/features/star_trek.html.

Webpage -- with an organization as the author

(2:39 p.m.). Accessed April 23, 2013. <http://www.jammersreviews.com/articles/confessions.php>.

Include the (time) if available. Note that the month and day are separated from the year.

Parenthetical References

The sources that you use should be cited in the text of your paper, either in parentheses or as part of the text itself:

During the turbulent 1960s, science fiction programs on television reflected the public's attitudes toward the older generation (Hodges 2003, 176).

Hodges (2003, 176) discussed how, during the turbulent 1960s, science fiction programs on television reflected the public's attitudes toward the older generation.

In a 2003 article, Hodges (176) discussed how, during the turbulent 1960s, science fiction programs on television reflected the public's attitudes toward the older generation.

Two authors:

(Kirk and Spock 2013, 47)

Three authors:

(Kirk, Spock, and McCoy 2013, 47)

Four or more authors:

(Kirk et al. 2013, 47)

But include all of the authors in the reference list.

Corporate author:

(NASAJPL 2007, 47)

Create an abbreviation for long names.

No author:

("Roddenberry Legacy" 2007, 47)

Use the first few words to shorten the title, excluding initial articles. Place the title in italics or quotation marks (or neither) the same way that you would in the reference list.

No page numbers:

(Coppa 2008, para. 2.16)

("Undeveloped" 2011, under "1970s Series")

With short documents posted as a single, scrolling webpage, no page numbers are needed.

No date:

(Kirk, n.d., 47)

Do not use this for webpages. Use the date that you looked at the webpage.

Multivolume book:

(Kirk 2013, 3:47)

Encyclopedia Article:

If a well-known encyclopedia or dictionary is arranged alphabetically, do not include it in the reference list. Cite it only in the parenthetical reference in the text. Include only the title of the encyclopedia, the edition (unless it is the first), the title of the article, and the author (if there is one). Use s.v. before one word titles and s.vv. before multiword titles. Note that none of the words in the article title are capitalized unless they are proper nouns.

Hardcopy:

(The New Encyclopaedia Britannica, 15th ed., s.v. "astronomy")

From a database or website:

For well-known online encyclopedias, include the date of publication, modification, or access; and the DOI, URL, or shortened URL.

(Britannica Online Encyclopedia, Academic ed., s.v. "astronomy," by Michael Wulf Friedlander, accessed March 10, 2013, <http://www.britannica.com/EBchecked/topic/40047/astronomy>)

(Wikipedia, s.vv. "timeline of Star Trek," last modified February 5, 2013, http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Timeline_of_Star_Trek)

Articles from lesser-known encyclopedias or encyclopedias that are not arranged alphabetically should be treated the same as book articles or chapters and should be included in the reference list.

Newspaper Article:

Newspaper articles viewed on paper, microfilm, and websites should not be included in the reference list. Cite them only in the parenthetical references in the text. Include only the author, article title, newspaper title, date, and - for websites - the date you looked at it. Do not include the page numbers or URL. If you incorporate some of the citation information into your text, then only the remaining information needs to be included in the parentheses.

(Sarah Lyall, "To Boldly Go Where Shakespeare Calls," New York Times, January 27, 2008, accessed April 10, 2013)

However, the newspaper's magazine section and weekend supplements should be treated as if they were regular magazines, so the page numbers (if available) should be included - but only the specific pages that you used, not the page range of the entire article.

Magazine Article:

Magazine articles viewed on paper, microfilm, and websites should not be included in the reference list. Cite them only in the parenthetical references in the text. Include only the author, article title, magazine title, date, specific pages that you used (not the page range of the entire article), and - for websites - the date you looked at it. Do not include the URL. If you incorporate some of the citation information into your text, then only the remaining information needs to be included in the parentheses.
